

Important information for History Students in New South Wales: NESA requirements for different combinations of teaching areas in Modern and Ancient History

NSW: Students who want to be able to teach both Modern and Ancient History should extend their minor or major to achieve this.

- MAJOR (First teaching area in Modern History and Second teaching area in Ancient History): Take at least five units of Modern History and three units of Ancient History. Include HIST106, HIST308 and one more 300-level Modern History unit.
- MAJOR (First teaching area in Ancient History and Second teaching area in Modern History): Take at least five units of Ancient History and three units of Modern History. Include HIST106, HIST308 and one more 300-level Modern History unit.
- MAJOR+2 (First teaching area in Modern and Ancient History): Take ten units with at least five units of Ancient History and five units of Modern History. Include HIST106 and HIST308.
- MINOR+2 (Second teaching area in Modern and Ancient): Include at least three units of Modern History and three units of Ancient History.

NSW: Students who only want to teach Ancient or Modern (not both):

- MAJOR in Modern History: Take at least five units of Modern History. Include HIST106 and one unit of 300-level Modern History. In addition, you must also take HIST308 as well as two more units of History (two Ancient or two Modern or one of each).
- MAJOR in Ancient History: Take at least five units of Ancient History. In addition, you must also take HIST106, HIST308 and one more unit of 300-level Modern History.
- MINOR in Modern History: Take at least three units of Modern History and one unit of Ancient or Medieval History.
- MINOR in Ancient History: Take at least three units of Ancient History and one unit of Modern or Medieval History.
- MINOR+2 in Modern History: Take five units of Modern History, plus one unit of Ancient or Medieval History. Two of your units must be at 300-level for you to qualify for a first teaching area.
- MINOR+2 in Ancient History: Take four units of Ancient History plus HIST308, plus any 300-level Modern History unit for you to qualify for a first teaching area.

Note: HIST308 can be counted as either Modern or Ancient History unit. Due to the complexity of the various course rules in the BED (Secondary)/BA degrees in NSW, please contact your Course Coordinator if you have any questions regarding your Ancient or Modern History majors.
